DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 1 and 2 are allowed.
2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

None of the prior art teaches or suggests data synchronization arrangement as the present application. US 2005/0008111 A1 is a very close art to the present application. Both these two application are direct to data synchronization and decrease error rate. US 2005/0008111 A1 teaches includes a flip-flop, a phase detect circuit, a pointer, a selector and a multiphase clock output PLL. Input data are latched to the flip-flop based on a clock that is output from the selector. The phase detect circuit performs phase comparison between input data and clock that is output from the selector, and outputs any of control signals of an UP signal (up-signal), a FIX signal (FIX signal), and a DN signal (DOWN signal) and divided clocks, respectively. The pointer controls the selector by receiving an UP, FIX, or DN signals. The selector switches and outputs a clock phase, which is output from the multiphase clock output PLL, to the flip-flop based on the control of the pointer. The multiphase clock output PLL generates and outputs plural clocks. US 2005/0008111 A1, however, is filed later than the current application. The current application specifically teaches two flip-flops. The second flip-flop is a dual edge triggered flip-flop, which is connected with its data input to the clock input of the first flip-flop and with its clock input to the data input of the first flip-flop to sample the selected system clock signal by means of the incoming data stream on every data transition thereof to generate on its output a retard clock signal that is high if the selected system clock signal is high when sampled and that is low if the selected system clock signal is low when sampled, a divider is connected with its input to the data input of the first flip-flop and is adapted to generate a counter clock signal on its output every time a predetermined number of data transitions has occurred in the data stream, and a clock phase counter is connected with its input to the output of the dual edge triggered second flip-flop, with its clock input to the output of the divider, and with its output to the selector to control the selector to select another one of n (n is an integer) clock signals to be the system clock signal in response to the retard clock signal being high or low.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
